PLYMOUTH, IND.

The 41st annual Marshall county Sunday school convention closed Saturday afternoon. Many pronouncements were made. Everything possible was done by the Methodist people, for the comfort of the convention guests.

The music, exhibits, registration, and all details were carried smoothly along.

On Thursday and part of the day Friday, Rev. E. L. Dakin of Loganport was before the convention. He is a truly great Sunday school pastor, and gave from a wonderful personal experience. He should be in demand in every part of the state.

He left unmeasured influence in the lives of all who heard him. A part of Friday and on Saturday Dr. M. A. Honline, Dayton, Ohio, was the speaker. He is perhaps the greatest Bible student ever heard in Plymouth, and as some say, "He alone, is a whole convention." Miss Florence E. Lanham, Indianapolis, had charge of the older girls' work, and although this was the first attempt to reach the older girls of the county, nearly 100 registered. Great results are expected from the older boys and older girls.

State Sec'y G. N. Burnie always, after the whole convention is summed up, seems to be the spirit of the days, from a human standpoint. He is so splendid in all phases of Sunday school work.

It was a surprise indeed when Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman walked into the convention Thursday afternoon. He was passing through the city, and had a few hours here. His short address will be remembered always by all who heard him. His presence placed the high standards of the convention, and not once did it become lower.

The home department banquet was great. The room and tables were beautiful, the menu excellent, the service perfect, and the program inspiring.

The luncheon for older girls and older boys on Saturday was a revelation to the few adult folks admitted. Give the young folks the chance and they will surprise everybody. They know how to do things, and the program, made up entirely of young people, was the cleverest thing ever heard in a Plymouth banquet room. Fred Hess as toastmaster was perfect.

The mothers' and daughters' meeting on Friday night crowded the Evangelical church. Mrs. Judge Stevens read very beautifully the "Three Weavers." "Polished Corner" and every woman and older girl went away thoughtful and inspired.

An orchestra of the Cullison Brothers, and a quartet of the "Knights of the Reformed," added interest to the fathers' and sons' meeting, splendidly addressed by Mr. Burnie and Dr. Honline.
